CDUHR Pilot Awards

The Center provides pilot awards to investigators to undertake new research initiatives or test the feasibility of new research strategies. Several funded pilots have led to NIH-funded projects. We recently funded 2 new projects:

Moving Beyond Social Support: Examining the Role of Adult Attachment, Daily Discrimination, Stress Physiology and Substance Use Among Young Sexual Minority Men

Dr. Stephanie Cook will be evaluating the association between adult attachment, perceived sexual orientation discrimination, biological responses to stress and substance use among young minority men who have sex with men.

Adapting an Evidence-Based HIV/STI Risk Reduction Intervention to Address Oppressive Sexual Scripts Among Substance Using Heterosexual African American Males and Females

Drs. Stephanie Campos and Alexis Jemal will be adapting an evidence-based intervention to reduce HIV/STI risk among substance using, heterosexually identified men and women who have multiple sex partners.

Affiliated International Investigators

We are pleased to announce the addition of seven affiliated international investigators, all working on international projects with our local CDUHR-affiliated investigators. This will provide an invaluable exchange, enabling these international investigators to access CDUHR resources, while they will advise CDUHR on issues related to HIV, HCV, and substance use in international settings.
